Objective

To raise awareness of the real, raw dangers of drink driving.

Description

The primary objective of the campaign was to raise awareness among the public and public safety authorities about the serious, immediate dangers of drink driving. It was designed to be as realistic as possible, aiming to engage audiences at multiple levels through impactful social media posts.

Starting in August 2024 the campaign culminated during the ROADPOL Safety Days, which coincided with the European Commission's European Mobility Week from September 16 to 22. During this week Malta's local police directly engaged the public and promoting safe driving practices (as part of the ROADPOL Safety Days). Public and private institutions, road safety NGOs and educational organisations and insurance agencies were encouraged to support the week by organising events to spread its message.

The vibrant Maltese summer is a season of fun and enjoyment where people enjoy parties, BBQs, festas and other social gatherings. However, excessive drinking is not uncommon, and some seem unaware of the devastating consequences drink-driving can have.

Therefore, the campaign focussed on drink driving and aimed underline the fact that people might underestimate the effects of excessive alcohol consumption. The message conveyed was simple yet powerful – Arrive Alive, do not drink and drive!

The core of the campaign featured a series of images which highlight the danger, recklessness and thoughtlessness of driving drunk:

- A blood transfusion bag with the “Make sure this is not your next cocktail!” message.
- A driver looking at a map app on their phone with the “There’s no ETA when you drive drunk” message.
- Traffic signs pointing to a Hospital, a Morgue and a Prison with the “Driving drunk does not give you many options” message.
- A shark fin with the “Would you swim with a shark? Then why do you drink and drive?” message.

To further strengthen the message, a video was produced which projects the drama and chilling instances during a car crash. The Malta Police Force provided support during the filming process.

The campaign was run on social media posts (Facebook/Instagram) with information posted on the drinkawaremalta.com website. Press releases were also sent to further share the message.
